EXEMPT VS. NON-EXEMPT EMPLOYEES: A GUIDE TO CALIFORNIA LAW

Certain employees are “nonexempt” under California law. They have many rights that “exempt” employees do not.
CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Introduction</th>
<th>4</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ch. 1. The Rights of Nonexempt Employees</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.1. Minimum Wage Rights</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.2. Overtime Rights</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.3. Meal Break Rights</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.4. Rest Break Rights</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ch. 2. Determining Whether an Employee is Exempt</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ch. 3. The Salary Requirement</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.1. &quot;Salary&quot; Defined</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2. Calculating the Minimum Salary</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ch. 4. The White Collar Duties</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.1. Administrative Employees</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.2. Executive Employees</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.3. Professional Employees</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ch. 5. The Discretion &amp; Independent Judgment Requirement</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ch. 6. Job-Specific Exemptions</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1. Commissioned Employees</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2. Physicians and Surgeons</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.3. Computer Professionals</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.4. Private School Teachers</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.5. Outside Salespersons</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
6.6. Truck Drivers .............................................................. 24
6.7. Union Employees ....................................................... 24
6.8. Other Job-Specific Exemptions ................................. 24

Ch. 7. Consequences of Misclassification ......................... 26

7.1. Unpaid Overtime .................................................. 26
7.2. Rest Break & Meal Period Penalties ....................... 27
7.3. Pay Stub Penalties ................................................. 27
7.4. Waiting Time Penalties ......................................... 28

Ch. 8. What to Do If You’ve Been Misclassified ............... 29

8.1. Deadlines to File Claims ....................................... 29
8.2. Exceptions .......................................................... 30
8.3. Federal Cases ....................................................... 31
INTRODUCTION

California labor laws require most employers to follow certain rules—like paying overtime, tracking hours, or providing rest breaks. Some types of jobs, however, are exempt from these requirements. An exempt employee is someone whose job is not subject to one or more sets of wage and hour laws.

In most cases, there are three simple requirements to determine whether a worker is an exempt employee under California law:

1. Minimum Salary. The employee must be paid a salary that is at least twice the state minimum wage for full-time employment.¹

2. White Collar Duties. The employee’s primary duties must consist of administrative, executive, or professional tasks.²

3. Independent Judgment. The employee’s job duties must involve the use of discretion and independent judgment.³

---

¹ Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a); Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, § 11040.

² Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a)

³ Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a)
If all three requirements are met, the employee will usually be classified as “exempt” from overtime, minimum wage, and rest break requirements (but not meal break requirements). There are, however, many caveats to this test.

There are also some jobs that are subject to a different test altogether. And some employees are only partially exempt; meaning, they are protected by certain labor laws, but not others.

The rest of this article explains these requirements in greater detail, as well as what happens when employers fail to properly classify their employees under California Law.
CH. 1. THE RIGHTS OF NONEXEMPT EMPLOYEES

1.1. MINIMUM WAGE RIGHTS

Federal law requires employers to pay nonexempt employees a minimum wage of $7.25 per hour.\(^4\) Fortunately, California state law is more favorable to employees than in this context.

As of January 1, 2018, California law requires nonexempt employees that work for an employer with 25 or fewer employees to be paid a minimum of $10.50 per hour.\(^5\) Employees that work for an employer with more than 25 employees are entitled to be paid $11.00 per hour.\(^6\)

Certain cities and counties have established a minimum wage higher than the statewide minimum wage. San Francisco, for example, has established a $13.00 per hour minimum wage for businesses within the

\(^5\) Labor Code, § 1182.12, subds. (b)(2).

\(^6\) Labor Code, § 1182.12, subds. (b)(1).
city’s geographical boundaries.\textsuperscript{7}

1.2. OVERTIME RIGHTS

Federal law requires employers to pay nonexempt employees an overtime rate of at least one-and-one-half times their regular hourly wage for each hour worked in excess of 40 during a workweek.\textsuperscript{8}

Again, California law protects nonexempt employees to a greater degree than federal law.\textsuperscript{9}

California’s overtime law requires employers to pay nonexempt employees \textit{one-and-a-half times} their regular hourly rate of pay for:

- All hours worked in excess of 8 in a single workday,
- All hours worked in excess of 40 in a single workweek, and
- The first 8 hours worked on the seventh consecutive day of work in the workweek.\textsuperscript{10}

California employers are required to pay nonexempt employees \textit{twice their regular hourly rate} of pay for:

- All hours worked in excess of 12 in a single workday, and
- All hours worked in excess of 8 on the seventh consecutive day of work in the workweek.\textsuperscript{11}

1.3. MEAL BREAK RIGHTS

Most employees in California (including most exempt employees) are entitled to an unpaid, \textit{30-minute meal break} if they work more than 5

\textsuperscript{7} San Francisco Admin. Code § 12R.4.

\textsuperscript{8} 29 U.S.C. § 207.

\textsuperscript{9} Labor Code, § 510.

\textsuperscript{10} Labor Code, § 510, subd. (a); see also Labor Code, §§ 511, 514, 515.

\textsuperscript{11} Labor Code, § 510, subd. (a).
hours in a day. A second meal break is required if employees work more than 10 hours in a day. Employees can agree to waive the first meal break if they do not work more than 6 hours in a day. They can agree to waive the second meal break if they do not work more than 12 hours in a day, and the first meal break was not waived. During the meal break, the employee must be relieved of all responsibility and be free to leave the work premises. If the employee is required to remain on the employer’s premises or job site, the employee must be paid for the meal break. When employers fail to provide an employee a meal break, they are required to pay the employee an extra one hour of pay at the employee’s regular hourly rate. The employee may only earn one extra hour per workday for their employer’s failure to provide them with missed meal breaks. There are some types of exemptions that apply to meal breaks. But the main exemptions discussed in this article (namely, those that apply to executive, administrative, and professional employees) do not apply to meal breaks.

---

12 Labor Code, § 512, subd. (a); Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, § 11050, subd. (11).
13 Labor Code, § 512, subd. (a).
14 Labor Code, § 512, subd. (a).
15 Labor Code, § 512, subd. (a).
18 See, e.g., Labor Code, § 512, subd. (e).
19 Labor Code, §§ 512, subd. (a), 516, subd. (a).
1.4. REST BREAK RIGHTS

Nonexempt employees in California are also entitled to take a paid 10-minute rest period during the middle of each 4-hour work period.20

Employees are not entitled to a rest period if they work less than 3.5 hours in the work day.21

When employers fail to provide an employee a rest period, they are required to pay the employee an extra one hour of pay at the employee’s regular hourly rate. The employee may only earn one extra hour per workday for their employer’s failure to provide them with missed rest period.22

Employers must also provide reasonable breaks must also be provided to lactating mothers who want to express breast milk for their children.23

Lactation breaks must be paid if they are taken during the employee’s regular rest period. They do not need not be paid to the extent that they last longer than, or are in addition to, the regular rest period.24

23 Labor Code, § 1030.
24 Labor Code, § 1030.
CH. 2. DETERMINING WHETHER AN EMPLOYEE IS EXEMPT

Certain employees are exempt from California and federal laws governing minimum wage, overtime, work hours, and rest periods.\(^{25}\)

As mentioned above, there are usually three simple requirements to determine whether a worker is an exempt employee under California law:

- Minimum Salary. The employee must be paid a salary that is at least twice the state minimum wage for full-time employment.\(^{26}\)

- White Collar Duties. The employee’s primary duties must consist of administrative, executive, or professional tasks.\(^{27}\)

- Independent Judgment. The employee’s job duties must involve the use of discretion and independent judgment.\(^{28}\)

In addition to this three-part test, there are several types of exemptions that apply to specific jobs. The most common job-specific exemptions apply to:

- Commissioned employees,

- Physicians and surgeons,

- Computer professionals,

- Private school teachers,

- Outside salespersons,

- Truck drivers, and

- Union employees.

These job-specific exemptions have their own tests (distinct from

---

\(^{26}\) Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a); Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, § 11040.

\(^{27}\) Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a).

\(^{28}\) Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a).
the three-part test mentioned above). And some of them are only partially-exempt. Each job-specific exemption is discussed in their own section below.

Importantly, employers are only entitled to claim an exemption when an employee “plainly and unmistakably” meets the standard required for the exemption. When doubt exists, the law generally requires the employee to be classified as nonexempt.

29 Nordquist v. McGraw-Hill Broadcasting Co. (1995) 32 Cal.App.4th 555, 562 [“Exemptions are narrowly construed against the employer and their application is limited to those employees plainly and unmistakably within their terms.”]; Arnold v. Ben Kanowsky, Inc. (1960) 361 U.S. 388, 392 [80 S.Ct. 453, 456] [“We have held that [FLSA] exemptions are to be narrowly construed against the employers seeking to assert them and their application limited to those establishments plainly and unmistakably within their terms and spirit.”].
In general, an employee is only exempt if they are paid on a salary basis (rather than an hourly wage). The salary must be at least twice the state minimum wage for full-time employment.

3.1. "SALARY" DEFINED

A salary, for these purposes, is an unvarying minimum amount of pay. The employee’s pay must be predetermined, and cannot change based on the number of hours worked or the quality of the work performed.

Courts have suggested that employers can deduct from an employ-

---

30 Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a); Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, § 11040.

31 Labor Code, § 515, subds. (a), (c).

ee’s pay for full-day absences and still consider the employee to be paid on a salary basis. But the employee would no longer be considered “salaried” if the employer deducted for partial-day absences. If the employee’s pay is based on the number of hours worked with no minimum guarantee, the employee will be treated as being an hourly employee (an thus nonexempt).

3.2. Calculating the Minimum Salary

As mentioned above, California law requires the employee to be paid a monthly salary of at least twice the state minimum wage for full-time employment to qualify as exempt. For these purposes, full-time employment is considered 40 hours per week.

As of January 1, 2018, there are two possible amounts for an employee’s minimum wage. Employees that work for an employer with 25 or fewer employees are entitled to a minimum wage of $10.50 per hour. Employees that work for an employer with more than 25 employees are entitled to be paid $11.00 per hour.

So, to meet the minimum salary requirement, the applicable minimum wage must be multiple by two, and then multiplied by 40 hours per week. That gives us a weekly salary that is twice the minimum wage.

If the applicable minimum wage is $10.50, the minimum salary is $840.00 per week (or $3,640.00 per month). If the applicable minimum

---

35 Conley v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co. (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 260, 267 [“It is undisputed that the combined effect of these provisions of federal law is to preclude employers from docking the pay of an employee for an absence of less than a day (a partial-day absence). If they do, then the involved employees do not meet the salary basis test, and are nonexempt for purposes of overtime pay.”].

37 Labor Code, § 515, subds. (a), (c).

38 Labor Code, § 1182.12, subds. (a).

39 Labor Code, § 1182.12, subds. (b)(1).
wage is $11.00, the minimum salary is $880.00 per week (or $3,813.33 per month).
CH. 4. THE WHITE COLLAR DUTIES

If the salary requirements are met, the next question is whether the employee is employed in an administrative, executive, or professional capacity. This is sometimes called the “white collar duties” test.

To determine whether an employee is employed in an administrative, executive, or professional capacity, we look at which duties the employee actually performs—regardless of job title or how the job is defined in a position description.

Importantly, the white collar duties test focuses on the employee’s primary duties. California law requires an employee to devote more than half of his or her working hours to the primary duty in order to satisfy this test.

An employee who meets this test will be exempt from several rights, including:

- The right to 10-minute rest periods,

40 Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a).

42 Labor Code, § 515, subd. (c).
The right to overtime compensation, and

The right to a minimum wage (provided, of course, that they met the minimum salary requirement).

It is therefore important to carefully determine whether an employee meets all requirements of the test.

4.1. ADMINISTRATIVE EMPLOYEES

An employee is considered employed in an administrative capacity if their primary duty is office or nonmanual work directly related to management or general business operations.

Work relates to management or general business operations when the employee assists in running the business.

Secretaries, store clerks, bookkeepers, and lead operators on production lines cannot be classified as administrative employees because they do not help run the business.

Examples of duties that relate to management or general business operations include responsibility for marketing, research, budgeting, finance, accounting, purchasing, quality control, human resources, labor or government relations, regulatory compliance, and database administration.

4.2. EXECUTIVE EMPLOYEES

An employee is considered employed in an executive capacity when:

44 Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11010–11150, subds. (1)(A)(2) [defining administrative employee under California law]. An employee might also be considered administrative if they perform “functions in the administration of a school system, or educational establishment or institution, or of a department or subdivision thereof, in work directly related to the academic instruction or training carried on therein.” (Id.)

45 29 C.F.R. § 541.201(a).

46 29 C.F.R. § 541.201(b).
Their primary duty is the management of a business or one of its departments;

They regularly direct the work of two or more other employees; and

They have the authority to hire and fire employees, or to make recommendations about hiring, firing, promotions, and wages that are given particular weight.\(^47\)

Management includes such activities as hiring, firing, training, supervising, and disciplining employees; making work assignments; resolving employee grievances; maintaining production or sales records; ordering materials or inventory; and planning a budget.\(^48\)

Executive employees receive little direct supervision.

4.3. PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYEES

There are three types of professional employees that can qualify for exemptions:

- Licensed Professionals. People who are licensed or certified by the State of California and are primarily engaged in the practice of: law, medicine, dentistry, optometry, architecture, engineering, teaching,\(^49\) or accounting.\(^50\)

- Learned Professionals. People who have advanced knowledge in a field of science or learning that is customarily acquired by prolonged and specialized study.\(^51\)

- Creative Professionals. People who focus on invention, imagination, originality, or talent in a recognized field that is artistic or creative.\textsuperscript{52}

The professional employee exemption is fact-specific and depends on the nature of the work that the employee primarily undertakes.

Of note, registered nurses who are employed to engage in the practice of nursing are not exempt professionals, but they might still be exempt as administrators or executives.\textsuperscript{53}

\textsuperscript{52} 29 C.F.R. § 541.300 [defining professional employee under the federal FLSA]; Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11010–11150, subd. (1)(A)(3) [defining professional employee under California law].

\textsuperscript{53} Labor Code, § 515, subd. (f)(1).
To qualify as an exempt employee, California’s Labor Code requires the worker to regularly exercise discretion and independent judgment in performing their duties.\(^{54}\)

An employee exercises discretion and independent judgment when the employee makes and implements important choices after considering competing courses of action.\(^{55}\)

An employee’s judgment is independent when it is free from immediate direction or supervision, even if an employee who is higher in the management chain has the authority to override the decision.\(^{56}\)

\(^{54}\) Labor Code, § 515, subd. (a).

\(^{55}\) 29 C.F.R. § 541.202(a) [“In general, the exercise of discretion and independent judgment involves the comparison and the evaluation of possible courses of conduct, and acting or making a decision after the various possibilities have been considered.”].

\(^{56}\) 29 C.F.R. § 541.202(c) [“The exercise of discretion and independent judgment implies that the employee has authority to make an independent choice, free from immediate direction or supervision. However, employees can exercise discretion and independent judgment even if their decisions or recommendations are reviewed at a higher level.”].
CH. 6. JOB-SPECIFIC EXEMPTIONS

In addition to the main exemptions explained above, a handful of other occupations are exempt from some or all of California’s labor laws. The more common exemptions are discussed below.

6.1. COMMISSIONED EMPLOYEES

Employees who are paid on a commission basis are sometimes exempt from California’s overtime pay laws. To qualify for this exemption, the following requirements must be met:

- The employee’s earnings are more than one-and-a-half times the minimum wage.
- Commission payments constitute more than half of the employee’s total compensation.
- They work in either: the retail industry, or a professional, technical, or clerical occupation.\(^57\)

\(^57\) Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11040, subd. (3)(D), 11070, subds. (3)(D).
Commissions are wage payments that an employee is entitled to as a result of sales they make. In a commission-based arrangement, the size of the employee’s compensation depends on the amount or value of the thing that was sold.\(^{58}\)

A discretionary payment that an employer can choose to pay or withhold, such as a performance bonus, is not a commission even if it is computed as a percentage of sales or profits.\(^{59}\)

6.2. PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS

Licensed physicians and surgeons are sometimes exempt for the purposes of overtime compensation. To fall under this exemption, the physician or surgeon must:

- Be paid at an hourly rate of at least $55.00 per hour.
- Perform, as their primary duties, tasks that require them to be licensed.\(^{60}\)

The applicability of this exemption is limited. Medical interns and residents do not qualify. Nor do physicians covered by certain types of collective bargaining agreements.\(^{61}\)

6.3. COMPUTER PROFESSIONALS

Employees in the computer software field are sometimes exempt for the purposes of overtime compensation.\(^{62}\) To qualify for this exemption, the following requirements must be met:

---

58 Labor Code § 204.1 defines commissions as “compensation paid to any person for services rendered in the sale of such employer’s property or services and based proportionately upon the amount or value thereof.” (See also Ariso v. CarMax, Inc. (2011) 195 Cal.App.4th 996, 1003.)

59 See Labor Code, § 2751, subd. (c).

60 Labor Code, § 515.6.

61 Labor Code, § 515.6, subd. (b).

62 Labor Code, § 515.5.
The employee must be primarily engaged in work that is intellectual or creative.63

The employee’s primary duties must require the exercise of discretion and independent judgment.64

The employee must be highly skilled in a field of computer systems analysis, programming, or software engineering.65

The employee’s primary duties must involve designing or developing computer hardware or software.66

If the employee is hourly, they must be paid at least $42.35 per hour.67

If the employee is salaried, they must earn at least $88,231.36 per year.68

6.4. PRIVATE SCHOOL TEACHERS

Many teachers are exempt under the professional exemption described above. But some teachers at private schools are exempt even if they don’t meet those requirements. Instead, they will be considered exempt if:

- They teach students who are in kindergarten or any of grades 1 through 12,
- They earn at least twice the state’s minimum wage, and
- They hold a baccalaureate degree (or higher) from an accredited institution of higher learning, or they meet the requirements for a teaching

---

63 Labor Code, § 515.5, subd. (a)(1).
64 Labor Code, § 515.5, subd. (a)(1).
65 Labor Code, § 515.5, subd. (a)(3).
67 Labor Code, § 515.5, subd. (a)(4).
68 Labor Code, § 515.5, subd. (a)(4).
credential from California or any other state.\footnote{69}

6.5. OUTSIDE SALESPERSONS

Employees who are considered “outside salespersons” are generally considered exempt employees.\footnote{70} An outside salesperson is defined as someone:

- Who is at least 18 years old,
- Who spends more than half of their working time away from their employer’s place of business, and
- Who sells items, services, contracts, or the use of facilities.\footnote{71}

6.6. TRUCK DRIVERS

Some truck drivers are exempt from California’s overtime laws (but not other employment rights, like meals breaks or the minimum wage).\footnote{72} This exemption applies to interstate truck drivers and drivers who transport hazardous materials.\footnote{73}

In those situations, the drivers’ hours are controlled by either: federal regulations,\footnote{74} or California’s motor vehicle regulations.\footnote{75}

\footnote{69} Labor Code, § 515.8.

\footnote{72} See, e.g., Cal. Code ofRegs., tit. 8, § 11090 (3)(L).

6.7. UNION EMPLOYEES

Union employees are sometimes exempt from California’s overtime laws. To qualify as exempt, the employees must be employed under a collective bargaining agreement that expressly provides for the wages, hours of work, and working conditions of the employees.

The collective bargaining agreement must also provide premium wage rates for all overtime hours worked and a regular hourly rate of pay of at least 30 percent more than the state minimum wage.

6.8. OTHER JOB-SPECIFIC EXEMPTIONS

California law is governed, in part, by a series of regulations called wage orders, which have been issued California’s Industrial Welfare Commission. The wage orders have adopted several exceptions to California’s overtime laws, in addition to those listed above, that apply to workers in specific industries or jobs. Occupations to which special overtimes rules apply include:

- Live-in household employees;
- Personal attendants;
- Camp counselors;
- Managers of homes for the aged;
- Certain providers of 24-hour residential childcare;
- Ambulance drivers and attendants;
- Agricultural occupations; and
- The employer’s spouse, children, and parents.

---

76 Labor Code, § 514.
77 Labor Code, § 514.
78 Labor Code, § 514.
79 Labor Code, § 1173.
80 See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11040, subd. 1(D).
CH. 7. CONSEQUENCES OF MISCLASSIFICATION

California courts narrowly construe the exemptions explained above. The employee must “plainly and unmistakably” meet the standard required for the exemption.\(^81\) Otherwise, the employee should be classified as nonexempt.

This standard strongly favors the employee, and the employer has the legal burden of proving an exemption.\(^82\) When employers fail to properly treat their employees as nonexempt, the consequences can be severe.

California law provides for a variety of penalties for Labor Code violations. Some of the most common examples are below.

---

\(^{81}\) Nordquist v. McGraw-Hill Broadcasting Co. (1995) 32 Cal.App.4th 555, 562 [“Exemptions are narrowly construed against the employer and their application is limited to those employees plainly and unmistakably within their terms.”].

\(^{82}\) Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co., Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 794–795 [“[T]he assertion of an exemption from the overtime laws is considered to be an affirmative defense, and therefore the employer bears the burden of proving the employee’s exemption.”].
7.1. UNPAID OVERTIME

Nonexempt employees in California have a right to be paid overtime wages when they work more than eight hours in a workday, 40 hours in a work week, or seven consecutive days. When employers misclassify their employees as exempt, they often fail to pay the employee overtime wages. Employees who have been deprived of overtime pay because of a misclassification can seek back-pay for the unpaid overtime wages the employee earned. These can add up quickly, even for employees earning a low amount.

Additionally, the employer may be obligated to pay the legal costs and attorney fees that the employee incurred while pursuing their overtime wages.

In some cases, there may also be a penalty of $100 or $200 per pay period in which California’s overtime laws were violated. That penalty is normally payable to the State of California, but there are some situations in which the employee can recover up to 25% of it.

7.2. REST BREAK & MEAL PERIOD PENALTIES

Non-exempt employees are entitled to meal breaks and rest periods. Employers who misclassify their employees as exempt commonly fail to provide the required breaks.

When an employee misses a meal period or rest break, they are entitled to one extra hour of pay at the employee’s regular hourly rate.

If the employee misses multiple rest breaks or meal periods, they can

---

83 Labor Code, §§ 204, 510, subd. (a); see also Labor Code, §§ 511, 514, 515.
84 Labor Code, §§ 204, 1194, subd. (a).
85 Labor Code, § 1194, subd. (a).
86 Labor Code, §§ 204, 210, 225.5.
87 Labor Code, §§ 210, 225.5; Labor Code, §§ 2698–2699.5.
88 Labor Code, § 512, subd. (a).
earn up to one extra hour per workday for their missed rest periods and an additional one hour per workday for their missed meal breaks.\(^90\)

Thus, a twelve-hour shift with no rest or meal breaks will entitle the employee to two extra hours of pay at the employee’s regular hourly rate.\(^91\)

7.3. PAY STUB PENALTIES

If the employer failed to keep proper records of the employee’s work, the employer may be obligated to pay the employee a penalty pay stub penalty.\(^92\) The amount of the penalty depends on the number of pay periods that the violation lasted.

For the first pay stub violation, the employee is entitled to a $50 penalty.\(^93\) The employee is then entitled to a penalty of $100 per pay period for every violation after that, up to $4,000.\(^94\)

This penalty often arises when the employee isn’t sure how much back-pay they might be owed because the employer mistakenly classified the employee as exempt.

7.4. WAITING TIME PENALTIES

When an employer willfully fails to pay an employee’s wages on-time as requirement by the Labor Code, they can be subject to a waiting time penalty. If an employee has been deprived of their full pay due to being misclassified as exempt, they are sometimes entitled to receive this.

Specifically, a delayed payment can result in a penalty of up to 30 days of the employee’s wages.\(^95\) The unpaid wages accrue on a daily basis,

---

\(^{90}\) Labor Code, § 226.7, subd. (c); Cal. Code of Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11010–11150, subs. (11) (B), (12)(B).

\(^{92}\) Labor Code, § 226.

\(^{93}\) Labor Code, § 226, subd. (c)(1).

\(^{94}\) Labor Code, § 226, subd. (c)(1).

\(^{95}\) Labor Code, § 203, subd. (a); see McLean v. State of California (2016) 1 Cal.5th 615, 619 [“An ‘employer’ that ‘willfully fails to pay’ in accordance with sections 201 and 202..."]. not just for the days that the employee might have worked—but also on non-workdays.

‘any wages of an employee who is discharged or who quits’ is subject to so-called waiting-time penalties of up to 30 days’ wages.”]
CH. 8. WHAT TO DO IF YOU’VE BEEN MISCLASSIFIED

Employees who have been improperly classified as exempt have three basic options:

- Resolve their dispute informally with their employer,
- File a lawsuit in court, or
- File a wage claim with California’s Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (the “DLSE”).

The best way to resolve an exemption dispute will depend on the employee’s specific situation. It’s usually a good idea to get the opinion of a lawyer before deciding how to proceed.

Employees should keep in mind, however, that there are strict deadlines they need to meet to file a wage claim or lawsuit.

---

96 See Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal.4th 1075, 1084 [“The employee may seek judicial relief by filing an ordinary civil action against the employer for breach of contract and/or for the wages prescribed by statute. [Citations.] Or the employee may seek administrative relief by filing a wage claim with the commissioner pursuant to a special statutory scheme codified in [Labor Code] sections 98 to 98.8.”].
8.1. DEADLINES TO FILE CLAIMS

Employees usually have three years in which to make a wage claim under California law.\(^{97}\)

The clock begins to run at the time the wages first become legally due. Usually, wages first become due on the regular payday for the pay period in which the employee performed the work.\(^{98}\)

When the work is continuing and the employee is paid periodically (e.g., weekly or monthly) a separate and distinct cause of action accrues on each payday, triggering on each occasion the running of a new period of limitations.\(^{99}\)

8.2. EXCEPTIONS

Employees wishing to pursue certain types of claims may face a shorter deadline. A claim for the breach of an oral contract must be filed within two years.\(^{100}\)

A claim seeking statutory penalties may also face a short deadline. The law is somewhat unsettled, but some penalties for the late payment of wages may be subject to a one-year statute of limitations.\(^{101}\) Other penalties, however, are subject to the normal three-year statute of limitations.\(^{102}\)

In some cases, a claim for unpaid wages (but not penalties) can be pursued as late as four years after the claim began to accrue. To take ad-

---

\(^{97}\) Code Civ. Proc., § 338, subd. (a); Aubry v. Goldhor (1988) 201 Cal.App.3d 399, 404 [“[A]n employer’s obligation to pay overtime compensation to his employee would not exist but for the Labor Code. An action to enforce that obligation therefore is governed by the three-year statute of limitations . . . .”].

\(^{100}\) Code of Civ. Proc., § 339.

\(^{101}\) See Code Civ. Proc., § 340, subd. (a) [statute of limitations: “Within one year: (a) An action upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture, if the action is given to an individual, or to an individual and the state, except if the statute imposing it prescribes a different limitation.”].

vantage of this longer statute of limitations, the employee must be filing their claim based on a breach of a written contract.\textsuperscript{103}

Alternatively, the employee might be able to claim the failure to pay their wages was an unlawful business practice under California’s Unfair Competition Law.\textsuperscript{104} This is sometimes another way for an employee to access a four-year statute of limitations, but the remedies can be limited.\textsuperscript{105}

8.3. FEDERAL CASES

Employees can usually seek back pay for overtime wages earned during the \textbf{two years} prior to making a wage claim. Federal law extends that time to three years if the misclassification was willful.\textsuperscript{106}

\textsuperscript{103} Code Civ. Proc., § 337, subd. (1) [“Within four years: 1. An action upon any contract, obligation or liability founded upon an instrument in writing . . . .”].

\textsuperscript{104} Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17208.

\textsuperscript{105} See Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17203; \textit{Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Products Co.} (2000) 23 Cal.4th 163, 178 [“[A]n order that a business pay to an employee wages unlawfully withheld is consistent with the legislative intent underlying the authorization in section 17203 for orders necessary to restore to a person in interest money or property acquired by means of an unfair business practice.”].

\textsuperscript{106} 29 U.S.C. § 255(a).
“you’ve worked hard for them

let us work hard for you.”